
Using insights from evaluations

Now, it is time to actually use the data from the evaluation. Use this data to adjust current plans and practices. This may mean modifying the transdisciplinary education program, starting new initiatives, or discontinuing certain aspects of the project. As a team member, you can also use the data for your own learning and development cycle.

Additionally, share the outcomes of the evaluation with external stakeholders. This ensures transparency and engagement, and increases the likelihood of the project being anchored in various contexts.